“Nirbhaya” is “Jyoti”

VISHAKHA, DELHI

A brutal gangrape in Delhi which moved a nation three years ago, the mother of the 23 years old woman's called her by her actual name. An incident that shook the whole country especially youth . Everyone wanted justice , everyone wanted current punishment. We were angry and we acted the way it was needed. Delhi's collectively memory was forever scarred by that gangrape and subsequent death. The world called her “Nirbhaya” , but today she is jyoti, who lit the minds of our nation to stand up and do something. All the accused were sentenced for death panelty except the juvenile who was sentenced for three years of detention and today he was released . The juvenile justice board ordered to give an amount of ten thousand rupees with a tailoring machine. But the victim's family an emotional appeal to keep the incarcerated the youngest man convicted for the rape of their daughter . From an anguished family this statement was completely justified . Not much has chnaged since december 16, 2012. Still women feel unsafe as rapists roam free in the capital of the of world's largest democracy. There was huge protest against the releasing of the juvenile but their voice didn't reached to our lawmaker . The protest and the challenges failed to prevent the release. Even Subramanian swamy filed a legal challnged but that too didn't worked . And the rapist is out, will live his life freely .but what about those parents who lost their daughter. They will not be able to trust our country's justice anymore. This case forced our system to take a huge act strongly when it comes to women's security. Despite all the attention nad agitation., we are still here. As police stations are still unsympathetic for women. Streets still stay dull at night and safe public transpot is still a dream for women. The concerned authorities should look into the matter and start impleting measures for betterement of the hafl or society.
